A New Mother Authology.

The charming selection of extracts in verse and prose on Our Mothers, by Mary Allette Ayer (Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Company, Boston), justifies by its contents its addition to several anthologies on the same subject that have appeared of late. The selections all touch on the relation between mother and child, without deviating into other matters as some editors, have been tempted to do. The typography is very attractive and the little book will give pleasure to many.

was wounded and now a literary complication has arisen in connection with one of his books, which if not a serious misfortune, at least illustrates the difficulty of being an author in time of war. The second volume of his autobiography, which was to have appeared in English this autumn, a year after his "My Childheod," is held up indefinitely, according to the Century Company, which is to issue the book, because the translation, made for an English publisher, has been locked up in Berlin for months, there to remain while the war lasts. The entire English edition of printed sheets is interned with it.
